

Nineteenth-Century French Studies

Ethics Statement

The Editorial Board of Nineteenth-Century French Studies is committed to the principles that have been the journal's hallmark since its inception in 1972: academic rigor, greater understanding of our discipline, respect for all, and the strictest ethical standards. Everyone who contributes to the journal is expected to share our unwavering commitment to the highest standards of scholarly inquiry. In particular:

We will make our best efforts to ensure that our peer-review processes and editorial decisions are fair and unbiased, and that manuscripts are judged solely on their merits by individuals with appropriate levels of expertise in the subject area.

We reserve the right to reject a manuscript at any point in the process if, after an unbiased evaluation, in the opinion of the Editor it does not align with the journal's mission or editorial policies or would be in conflict with the journal's legal requirements.

We will treat submitted manuscripts as confidential documents and will not discuss them or share information about them with anyone outside the Editorial Board, potential reviewers, or the publisher.

We expect transparency on the part of the Editorial Board and reviewers regarding potential conflicts of interest and will assign manuscripts to individuals who are not expected to have such conflicts.

We expect authors to help us uphold our ethical standards by submitting only original works; respecting the intellectual property rights of others; adhering to the journal's policies regarding simultaneous submissions; acknowledging sources; appropriately crediting all authors, other research participants, and funding sources; disclosing any potential conflicts of interest; and notifying the Editorial Board and/or publisher of any significant errors discovered after submission or publication.

We will promptly investigate any credible allegation of unethical or illegal practices related to an article or review that we have published. When warranted, we will issue corrections, retractions, and/or apologies, working with the author(s) as appropriate to find the best resolution.

Please address any concerns to the Editor at ncfsarticles@gmail.com.
